Logomark Design

The cube element represents structure, order, and a strong foundation, reflecting the brand's emphasis on reliability and innovation in a technical or scientific field. It symbolises the modularity and compactness of Cubesat technology, highlighting the team's expertise in creating sophisticated yet efficient solutions.

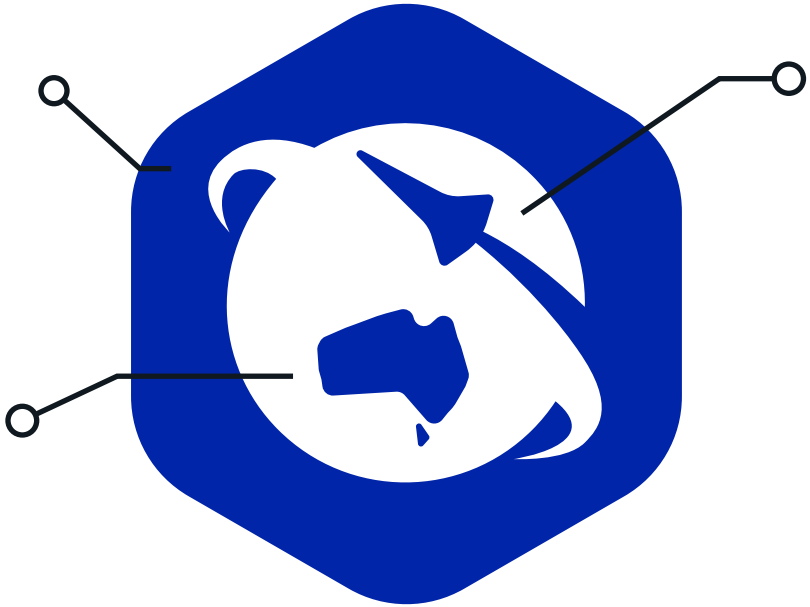
The 2D hexagon represents the core of the team's mission; constructing a CubeSat. It has been used as a bounding shape to the inner design to develop negative space and emphasise some of the inner elements. The rounded corners construct better visual cohesion and modernity for the team.



The rocket is symbolic of the aerospace nature of the team. The large trailing lines, which utilise both positive and negative space, illustrate the rocket orbiting around Earth. Furthermore, the direction of the rocket, pointed upwards, is figurative for the team's growth and skill development.

Australia is representative of the Perth aspect of the team – it instantly demonstrates to a viewer where the team is based. Through positioning and scaling, the shape has been placed in order to create symmetrical symmetry across the logo design.

Partnership Formatting

The logo design features two team logotype and logomarks, enabling partnership and sponsorship logos to be easily added.

Either the logomark or logotype can be exhanged for the partnership logo. Therefore, both logos will be displayed side-by-side, separated by the dividor. Please see the next page for how to space the logotypes and logomarks.

Do not use these guidelines as a standard for use of Partner logos. Please refer to the Partner's Guideline on how to format their logo correctly.

Logo Spacing

Each logotype and mark has their own individual spacing requirements. The hexagonal logo is formatted similarly to a square, so little spacing is requried around its edges. Contrastingly, the typography logotype requires a little more spacing.

Following this guideline will ensure both logotypes are clearly visible in a design and are not blocked and/or obstructed by any other elements.

The variartions (see next page) follow the same spacing regime.

Variations

Alternative versions of the logomarks are available and may be used interchangeably with the primary logomarks and logotypes.

These alternatives include a lighter-weight version, ideal for designs that emphasise white space.

Additionally, an elliptical logomark is provided for a more stylistic and modern touch.

Font Use

Typography refers to the art and technique of arranging type to make written language legible, readable, and visually appealing when displayed

Use of Typefaces

The primary typeface should be used in most scenarios, such as logos, branding material, presentations etc.

The secondary typeface can be used as an alternative to the primary font, or can be paired as an acompanying font.

The accent typeface may only be used as a decorative font in special cases where appearance trumps readability.

Primary Colours

Our color palette reflects the spirit and ambition of the team.

The primary colors embody our connection to space and our passion for exploration. The cobalt-blue is symbolic of the night-sky, versatility, and stability of the team. The off-shades of white and black develop a more nuanced and subtle effect of contrast in designs. The darker blue can be used in parallel with the cobalt blue for enhanced colour contrast.

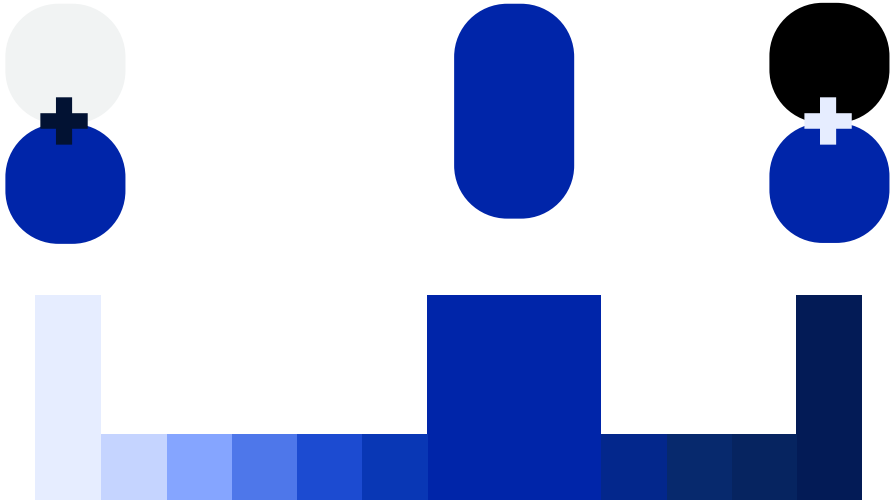
Shades & Hues

Variations of the brand colours, such as shades and hues, may be used. However, these should only create colours that blend between the existing palette options.

For example, on the right, the primary blue blends with black to form a dark navy, and with off-white to create a cloudy-blue.

These adjustments are permitted, but require approval from the Marketing Lead to ensure alignment with the official colour palette.



04 Usage & Tone of Voice

Tone of Voice

Refers to the style and manner which a brand communicates with its audience, shaping emotions conveyed through language

Usage of Marketing Material

PAST should speak out to all people, all material made under the team's name should be inclusive, accessible, and symbolic of our goal. All materials produced under the team's name should embrace these values and ensure that the design and messaging are consistent across the board. Following these guidelines ensures we maintain a cohesive and professional identity that resonates with all audiences.

Marketing materials must not be used in ways that are harmful to the team's image or misaligned with our values. If you're unsure about how to correctly apply these guidelines, please reach out to the Marketing Representative for guidance.

These guidelines should be followed when developing any external material and official internal material that has high visibility to stakeholders.

Your brand's tone of voice is the personality behind your messaging. It's how your brand speaks to your audience and how your audience perceives you. Consistency and clarity in tone are key to building trust and emotional connection.

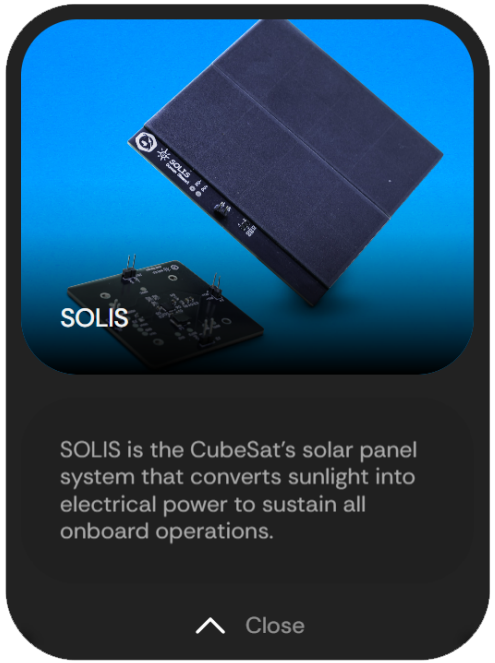
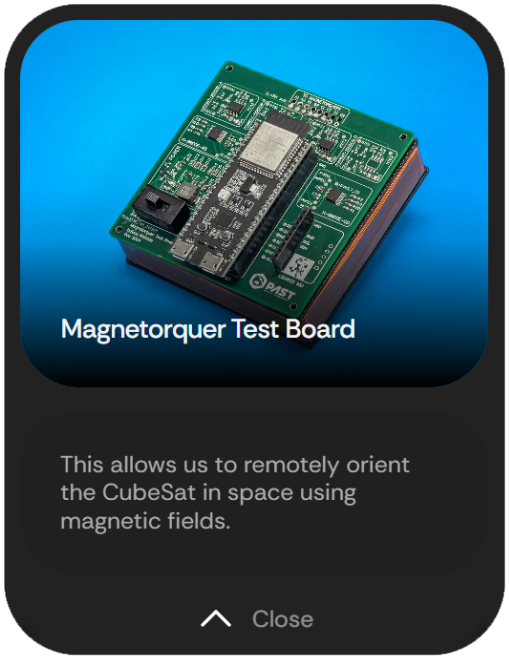
Steer Clear of Jargon

The team should use clear, inclusive language that is accessible to all audiences. Using terminology that the general public may not understand can hinder relationship-building and make our work less relatable.

For instance, instead of saying "GNSS", which may be unfamiliar to many, we could simply say "global positioning" or "GPS location" to make the concept easier to understand and foster stronger connections.





"STRATOS served as an integration platform for our preliminary CubeSat subsystems. In addition to our own systems, we flew a High-School developed payload from the BinarX program."

Be Consistent

Maintaining a consistent tone and style across all communication channels is crucial. This ensures that our team is easily recognisable and that the audience knows what to expect. Whether we're communicating on social media, in emails, or on your website, consistency in language, messaging, and visual elements helps build trust and reinforces our brand
